“PEOPLE BELIEVE IN AN ENTREPRENEURIAL FUTURE.”

It’s clear that the entrepreneurial spirit is alive and well around the world. We’ve learned through the Amway Global Entrepreneurship Report (AGER) over the last several years that the majority of people surveyed across the globe are open to owning their own business. But what motivates them, and which external environmental factors or internal attributes play a role, are questions that warrant further examination. That’s why we devoted AGER 2018 to What Drives the Entrepreneurial Spirit?

We asked nearly 50,000 respondents in 44 countries about their attitudes and perceptions toward not just the concept of owning a business, but also toward the infrastructure in their country, the type of business they would start, how they assess their own capabilities for starting and running a business and what are the areas of support they seek most.

The results bode well for entrepreneurship and highlight some intriguing insights and opportunities. Those under 35 years old continue to be the most positive toward entrepreneurship overall. There remains great opportunity to better support women who are more risk averse to starting their own businesses. And even though the world is becoming increasingly more digital, most respondents prefer to serve customers personally rather than digitally.

Gaining a greater understanding of why people decide for or against owning a business is helpful for effectively fostering a world of entrepreneurs. This knowledge can help business and government leaders to make decisions and take actions that help more people start their own businesses and reach their full potential in this area. More entrepreneurs mean more opportunity, more economic growth and more prosperity for everyone.

AMWAY ENTREPRENEURIAL SPIRIT INDEX (AESI)

If you think of yourself, do you agree with the following statements?

Desire: I consider starting a business as a desirable career opportunity for myself

Stability: My family or friends could never dissuade me from starting a business

Feasibility: I possess the necessary skills and resources for starting a business

AESI incorporates three equally weighted dimensions: desire, feasibility and stability. Countries are ranked by AESI score – decimal numbers are not illustrated in the data.

KEY FINDINGS: The Amway Entrepreneurial Spirit Index (AESI) has been measured for the third time and it reveals differences and allows to compare the entrepreneurial desires, the confidence in own abilities and the perceived social stability of respondents in surveyed countries. The average global AESI score of all 44 participating countries equals 47 and therefore is slightly lower than in 2016.

COUNTRY AVERAGES

- Professionally
- Hiring people
- Profitable
- Working alone
- Social
- Metropolitan
- Serve customers personally
- Serve customers digitally

KEY FINDINGS: The question about the ideal business reveals which kind of business the respondents actually would like to run. They could choose out of two options in five categories. Globally, most respondents prefer a profit-oriented business (80%) in which they sell a service (54%) personally (75%) to customers. Furthermore, they want to run a business in a metropolitan area (64%) with hired staff (57%). The preferences, though, vary by countries.
